

I am against this proposal. The exams as they are now seem to have the right amount of technical and operational questions. The Morse exam is a crucial part of our service and needs to be maintained. Without our exams we are nothing more than glorified CB operators. Haven't we learned our lesson from the elimination of licensing for CBers in the 70s? This proposal is only another step at lowering our standards and moving towards a non-licensed service. This proposal is bad for the Amateur Radio Service and should not be seriously considered.
